

Contributor Information

What's Field Guide?

Field Guide is an online journal dedicated to native plants and Australian gardening culture.

Our mission is to become a trusted destination for Australian gardeners looking to incorporate more native plants into their garden.

What we're looking for

We'll be launching in early 2018, and are currently seeking written content on the following:

- Creative and surprising how-to guides for projects incorporating native plants – with a focus on craft, cooking, and projects for small spaces
- Landscape gardening features – including interviews with landscape architects, and garden profiles
- Pieces on Australian botanical history and culture
- Articles on broader environmental issues that highlight the importance of native gardening
- Interviews with gardeners, botanists, scientists, artists, landscapers – essentially any individuals and groups working with native plants in an interesting way
- Personal pieces on your relationship with particular native plants

Pitches from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples are especially welcome.

We're also seeking the following visual content:

- Illustrations to pair with articles
- Photographs of native plants and gardens

Get in touch!

Pitches and queries: connor@studiosometimes.com

Field Guide is a non-profit organisation. Our content will be supported by online sales of native plants, grown by a small team of experts based on the Mornington Peninsula.

Pay Rates

Written content:
$200 for 600 - 900 words
Want to write longer (or have a concept for a series)? Get in touch.

Illustrations and photographs:
Commissioned in batches — contact us to discuss.

